proactive in making the links between climate change and human health to help build awareness. I can commit to that, as a start. And we will include questions about climate change-related attitudes and behaviours in our next rounds of public polling, through our Rapid Risk Factor Surveillance System.

The latest Lancet Countdown has shown that although there has been an accelerated response in the past five years, on the whole our lack of progress on climate change is jeopardizing human life and livelihoods. There are glimmers of progress that we need to build upon – so let's work with policy makers to set even lower targets and let's engage in discussions about meaningful and effective carbon pricing. Let's all transition towards more plant-based diets, reduce our energy use, reduce waste and park those fossil-fuel dependent cars so that we can walk or bike our way towards a healthier and happier new year. These are resolutions that translate into something much greater than just self-improvement.

Any actions we take to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and air pollution will benefit the health of our planet, ourselves, and our future generations. There is no time to delay - 2019 is here.

Back to the Future

Co-hosted by the Peterborough
Historical Society and Peterborough Public Health.

Peterborough Public Health celebrates 130 years with their “Back to the Future” Event on Saturday, February 9 - where you can discover Local Public Health’s History and Future.

Rosana Salvaterra, Medical Officer of Health. “With speakers representing various expertise, such as infectious diseases, Indigenous medicine, local history, nursing and the contributions of rural Women’s Institutes, we believe this event will leave participants better informed and inspired about what can happen when communities work together to improve health for all.”

Presentations will cover a unique mix of topics, such as polio and local vaccination programs, diabetes among Indigenous populations, milk pasteurization, public health nursing, drinking water protection and the history of sanitation efforts, and many others. The keynote speaker will be Professor Kenton Kroger, Department of Science and Technology Studies, at York University who will present “Inventing a Public for Ontario’s Public Health: 1882-85”. Other speakers include Indigenous elders, university professors, and public health leaders from across Ontario who will tell the fascinating story of local public health and what’s next for this exciting field.

Tickets include lunch, break refreshments and access to all presentations. To register online, visit www.Eventbrite.ca and search for “Back to the Future”. To register by phone at a reduced rate, please call 705-743-1000, ext. 264.

On February 18, 1889, a by-law was passed to create the first permanent Board of Health by the Town of Peterborough. Since that time, public health professionals together with community partners have implemented an impressive number of programs, services and infrastructure projects that have fundamentally improved the quality of life for local residents. On January 22, 1965, an agreement was signed between the County of Peterborough and the City of Peterborough to establish a joint Board of Health and organization.
